GENERAL NEWS.

Washington News

HAYES AND THE STAR ROUTES

NEW YORK, April 30—The World's Washington special says Hayes has been heard from in regard to what he knows of the star routes. He says that matter was brought to his attention just before last year's congressional investigation, no doubt, through the newspapers. He did not become very much exercised over it, it seems, he having information from senators and a number [illegible] officers [illegible] that expected service was just the thing for the frontiers. He quietly let congress go about an investigation and so far as he was concerned that was the end of it.

FALSIFYING THE RECORDS

Falsification of the rebel war records have been attempted in order to smirch the character of General Logan, and it has been discovered, and the clerks in charge are being watched or discharged.

A TREASURY CIRCULAR

The following circular was issued by the treasury department to-day:

Notice is hereby given that on and after Wednesday, May 4th 1881, the five per cent [illegible] of $1 [illegible] in the 101st call will be paid at the treasury of the United States, city of Washington, with interest from [illegible] to May [illegible]. The interest due May [illegible] 1881, on such registered bonds embraced in the 101st call as have not been received, will [illegible] as usual by checks drawn to the order of the payees of the bonds.

FRENCH FRIENDSHIP

[illegible] the French minister, accompanied [illegible] secretary of state, called on the president [illegible] and presented a letter, of which [illegible] is a translation:

[illegible] the French Republic to the [illegible] United States of America

[illegible] GOOD FRIENDS—I have just received letter wherein your honorable predecessor [illegible] excellency, Rutherford B. Hayes [illegible] me that in pursuance of a resolution [illegible] invited the government and [illegible] France to unite with the government [illegible] the United States on the 19th of [illegible] in the celebration of the one [illegible] anniversary of the battle of Yorktown [illegible] the invitation in the name of [illegible] the republic and in that of [illegible] French people. This solemn meeting [illegible] which has been preserved by [illegible] the part taken by [illegible] France in the glorious [illegible] independence and [illegible] United States calls [illegible] in France [illegible] which [illegible] pleasure [illegible] informing General [illegible] representative that having [illegible] we would participate in [illegible] American nation which has [illegible] and prosperity it has by invitation [illegible] the occasion [illegible] forever consecrated [illegible] battlefield [illegible] same character [illegible] welfare [illegible] the assurance [illegible] sincere thanks [illegible]

[illegible] March 2[illegible] 1881

[illegible] the [illegible] Monday. Five [illegible] Ingalls [illegible]

[illegible] at considerable length with a view of securing harmonious action in all points of difficulty, but it is understood in regard to one of them at least that no progress was made in the line of adjustment. The committee informed the president that Senator Conkling had given them to understand that he cared nothing for a continuance of the dead lock on his own account but had promoted it as far as the New York collectorship was concerned merely in deference to the wishes of his New York [illegible], who believed the delay would result in the withdrawal of Judge Robertson's nomination, which they earnestly desired in the interest of party harmony. The committee thereupon asked the president whether it would be considered trespassing to him to withdraw the nomination and have all the nominations promptly confirmed. Garfield in reply said with emphasis that no such proposition could be entertained and thus the conference ended.

GORHAM AND GARFIELD

An evening paper referring to the star service scandal says it is rumored that President Garfield is indignant at the tone of certain republican newspapers in their assaults upon and insulting allusions to himself for taking such a determined stand in this matter. Indeed he is reported to have said to a New England senator that Mr Gorham as an editor had so abused his position since the star route question was revived by repeated covert attacks upon the administration that if he (the senator) voted further to sustain the candidacy of Gorham for secretary of the senate he (the president) would consider it a personal affront.

CONTINUING BONDS

Up to this evening there have been received of the six per cent bonds for continuance $47 193 850 of which $8 477,750 have been received to-day. Papers representing the large portion of bonds held to secure circulation and deposit have also been received [illegible] properly referred, but for want of time the bonds have not yet been passed through for continuance. Notification has also been received from a large number of holders of sixes, of their intention to have their bonds continued, and asking for the necessary blanks. No doubt is entertained by the secretary that all the bonds will be presented in due time for continuance.

Steel Rails for the D & R G

ST LOUIS, April 30—A thousand tons of steel rails for the Denver & Rio Grande railway arrived here yesterday by barge from New Orleans. They go to Pueblo via the St Louis & San Francisco and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe lines. Twenty-five hundred additional tons are now in New Orleans being loaded on barges for this point.

Billy the Kid Escapes

SANTA FE, April 30—The New Mexican has information that Billy the Kid escaped from the jail at Lincoln night before last, killing the deputy sheriff, J W Bell, and Robert Olinger, another of his guards. The news came from Sheriff Garrett by courier to the sheriff of Socorro county and is no doubt true. There are no further particulars.

New England Excursionists

SALT LAKE, April 30—The New England excursion to the Pacific arrived in this city last evening, the wife of Dr Cattings curator of the Lowell Institute, having died on the cars just as the train passed the thousand mile tree. She took a hard cold en route, which resulted fatally, in spite of the best care and medical attention.

The weather is delightful, the season very early and the trees almost in full bloom, the smaller fruit trees having passed out of blossom. The good people of the excursion have apparently enjoyed riding around town very greatly. They stay here over Sunday, to-morrow, and then go on west.

Sufferers by the Flood

YANKTON, April 28—All telegraphic communication being destroyed this telegram is forwarded [illegible] City by mail. The Missouri has subsided and the river is falling almost as rapidly as it rose. For a week past the river has been out of its banks and overflowing the bottoms below Yankton again submerging a large portion of the land overflow by the Missouri river rise. The worst is now over. The [illegible] has been full from bluff to bluff and from a mile to a mile and a half wide. Its lower [illegible] about ten rods and a [illegible] bottom land for seventy-five miles up are [illegible] well and most of the houses upon the bottom have been swept away. The destruction of property is great. Destitute and sufferers are still being cared for in Yankton. Twenty [illegible] to [illegible] government rations [illegible] been issued and probably as much more furnished by Yankton people. Six boxes of clothing from Omaha have been distributed in [illegible] City, Lhommie, Cedar and Knox counties. The demand is greater than the supply and the applicants are in positive need. [illegible] Governor Hand is taking steps to secure the removal of the dead cattle, horses and dogs [illegible] as the carcasses are beginning to decompose. The steamers Helena, Big Horn and Rosebud which were cast [illegible] have been launched and are ready for work. The steamers Butte, Black Hills and Nellie Peck cannot be launched until the [illegible] river as [illegible] river front where they were left by the flood. The weather is warm and pleasant, the grass green on the hills and farmers are [illegible] in grain.

Deadwood's Townsite

CHICAGO, April 30—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says the question of the townsite of Deadwood is under consideration. Placer claimants through their attorney hold that the site on which Deadwood was located is placer mining and hence was not subject to townsite entry. On the other hand the city authorities of Deadwood say that their attorney claimed the right to enter it for townsite except where mineral lands [illegible] be proved to exist. The case came before the secretary on an appeal from the commissioner general of the land office who held that the land was [illegible] mineral lands and only subject to entry under the mining law. A decision by the secretary is awaited with interest.

Sisters in Law

NEW YORK, April 30—James Rome, who died October, 1871, left a will in which a share of his residuary estate was to be given to his granddaughter, Catharine Yates, with a provision that if she died without issue before she became of age it should go to her then living sisters and brothers. She so died in 1874 leaving two sisters of the whole blood and two of the half blood. The latter claimed one quarter each as their share and Judge Larimore yesterday decided in the Supreme court special term that half sisters were sisters within the meaning of the law, there being nothing in the will to indicate that the word was used in any but the primary sense.

An Elegant Depot

CHICAGO, April 30—The odious structures which have served as depots for the roads terminating in this city are being [illegible] convenient and handsome building. The latest addition to the list is the elegant new passenger depot of the various branches of the Northwestern railway, which will be opened Monday. Besides being more accessible than either of the old depots, it is an architectural triumph. It is situated on Wells and Kinzie streets, and is of colossal dimensions. The building cost nearly a quarter of a million of dollars, and is considered one of the handsomest in the city.

Theatrical Matters

CHICAGO, April 30—Haverly's theatre will continue to be used by him and the Mastodons for two weeks more, when it will probably close forever as a theatre.

The Academy of Music, on the West Side is one of the handsomest theatres in the city and has been making money fast, and is said to be the best paying theatre in America for the money invested. The season closes to-night. The entertainment is variety and light drama.

At McVicker's "One Hundred Wives" did only fairly, but will remain another week.

Bartley Campbell's play "Fairfax," will be given at Hooley's next week by the same company which has been playing "My Geraldine."

The Snelbacker combination and the wonderfully gifted Sara has been at the Olympic.

The Mitchell pleasure party in Our Goblins succeed the Ideal Opera company at the Grand Opera house. The latter company had one of the best engagements of the season.

Nat Goodwin, the Lingards, Hazel Kirke, Billee Taylor and the Voyagers are among the early announcements.

Hooley does not intend to take the San Francisco theatre as announced. John Hooley leaves for San Francisco with Keene to-day. George Learock is of the party, also Carl Abrend.

FOREIGN

Beaconsfield's Successor

NEW YORK, April 20—The Tribune's London special says: Lord Beaconsfield's death has left the tories much concerned about the leadership. There is no immediate necessity for the appointment but the bulk of the party are like sheep without a shepherd after the reliance they placed on Lord Beaconsfield. They are much divided as to a choice. Some of Lord Beaconsfield's latest expressions favored Sir Stafford Northcote as his successor but he is feeble and old womanish.

We are just three years old today and are beginning to walk

Every household should have a daily paper Don't borrow of your neighbor

Senator Conkling hopes with the aid of democratic ex senators in the lobby to defeat Robertson

Ex Secretary Sherman should withdraw his opposition to Sheldon so that a consistent fight for the confirmation of Robertson can be waged

Four per cent bonds are selling at 116½ Those who bought two years ago at par will receive if they sell now, about 12 per cent interest on their investment.

The plan of the secretary of the treasury to reduce the interest on the six per cents is succeeding admirably It is not likely that $50 000 000 will be redeemed in all

Even if the senate should decide to stand by the courtesy rule it should not be applied to Robertson He is called to fill a national position, and not a local one in New York state

Indiana wants to be recognized Her politicians are in Washington asking that offices be given the state, but making no claims for themselves They are wonderfully disinterested

Ex Secretary Schurz, in his St Louis paper to show that our prosperity is real says that $50,000 000 were lost in a few days in Wall street, in the recent short panic, but this did not affect our business interests

Regarding the question of refunding which was of so vital importance to the country and especially to New York as the financial center, Senator Conkling had nothing to say. He will, however make 'the greatest effort of his life,' on the confirmation of Robertson

It appears that the telegraphic dispatch regarding the burglary of Andover students was wrong in stating they were preparing for the ministry Both were atheists It is however characteristic of a certain style of news gatherers who are always endeavoring to slur the ministry We know of no reason for such a mistake except a malicious one

Austria is trying to suppress socialism by preventing free speech The entire edition of four newspapers was suppressed because they contained an item of news about a meeting of the socialists in London to endorse the assassination of the czar. There is as unwise as it is futile Free speech is more likely to destroy socialism than to strengthen it We are in no danger from socialism in this country

Canty is reprieved It seems to us that this power of the governor is too freely exercised The men convicted of murder have been desperadoes Reprieves lessen the chances of hanging them and increase their chances of freedom, which will give further opportunities for murdering There has been so much murdering and so little regard for life that punishment should follow more quickly the commission of the crime

OUR ANNIVERSARY

Three years ago to day the first copy of the DAILY GAZETTE was issued It was known well enough when it was issued, that the city was not populous or busy enough to have a daily But in the west a weekly must start a daily before the right time or an outsider will come in and take away its patronage by starting before it During this time the paper has been well patronized, and an effort has been made in return to furnish a paper carefully edited and complete in the news department With a larger circulation we could have spent more money We think we have, however made as good a paper as the amount of patronage that could be given demanded

Whatever merits the paper has had we hope to maintain and whatever deficiencies we will endeavor to abolish. It was our intention to have put on a new dress this morning and it was ordered for this purpose but there was an unexpected delay in filling the order and we shall be obliged to delay doing so for a few days We intend during the coming year to make the GAZETTE more valuable as a newspaper This morning we begin to print an extensive stock report which is obtained at considerable expense When our new dress is put on we shall change the make up of the paper and hope to introduce new and valuable features soon It is our intention to improve the GAZETTE in all departments as fast as the patronage will warrant We thank our friends for all they have done to make the paper successful

BEACONSFIELD'S BURIAL

The latest English despatches have brought tidings of how Beaconsfield died and now have told how he was buried Let those who strive for greatness who live forever a life of toil who continually exert themselves to gain position read of the last rites performed over the most remarkable man of modern times and see how simply he was at last laid away from earthly sight The burial of an earl a knight of the garter a literary celebrity an adviser of a queen a leader of thought a former of opinion an ambitious and a successful man was as simple as that of a New England clergyman, who should happen to be followed to a last resting place only by those who loved him

The remains were transferred at early morning from London to Hughenden manor the large old fashioned house where the ex Premier spent most of his life when not occupied with the state affairs The body reached the old mansion and was placed in the large drawing room, just as the first light of morning came slowly creeping upon the spot he loved so well Later in the day a special train brought the intimate friends and the Prince of Wales from London In the afternoon the simple procession left the Manor house, passed down the sloping hillside and to the church where the vicar received all that remained of Earl Beaconsfield As the body was bourn down the aisle, the organist played Beethoven's 'Funeral March,'' and the congregated friends stood in bowed and reverent attitude The grand service of the English church, beautiful in its simplicity, was read, and afterward the casket was borne out of the church and to the vault where the loved companion and wife of Beaconsfield is entombed During the entire service the bells of the Wycombe churches were tolled, people came from near and far offerings from all over the kingdom were sent to decorate the coffin, and at distant ports flags were at half mast, and not since the funeral of Wellington or Prince Albert had England shown such sincere grief

What was the power Beaconsfield had over the hearts of the English people? It is conceded that he leaves nothing which younger men may imitate He was a hard critic, a man with a purpose, a will, an energy most remarkable, but his statesmanship will not bear the investigations of history, his novels have no lofty sentiments, his whole life was simply an ambitious one And yet the queen loved and trusted him, he was the admired of the majority of the English people What then was the power which he had, what the magnetism which sent at his death, a genuine sorrow throughout all England.

It was because he had a large heart We never hear of his good deeds kind acts are often noblest which are safely guarded But at his coming death, when he knew that the slightest event would be obeyed, he asked that no grand ceremonies be performed, that no parade be given but requested that with simplicity and quietly, he might be carried to his beloved home, and with friends around him be buried by the side of one who perhaps could let us know that the cynic, the brilliant leader, the "dizzy' Disraeli, had a heart of great tenderness, a love of quiet and repose

There will long be grave doubts that this is so The world knew Beaconsfield only by his acts But he was ambitious, and to gain his end had he not to meet intrigue with intrigue? He could not expose his inmost thoughts and not be taken advantage of But when he knew his end was near, that his part in the drama was at an end we find no more the lofty ambition but a desire for rest for quiet, for simplicity Who can tell how often the wish had been with him to leave the toil the anxiety and the worry of his life and retreat to seclusion and rest at Hughenden He had reached the goal of his ambition He had been heard, as he declared he would be, and history may yet give to the world a new and a better idea of the man when his true nature is discovered Behind all the love he commanded, the honors he controlled must have been a heart which it is not generally supposed belonged to Disraeli

Oh, haul away, Lord haul away!
And haul my soul ashore
So cheerily oh, Lord, cheerily, oh!
A long pull and a strong pull, and a pull forevermore

The Rev Charles B Ransom, a Presbyterian pastor, who was married to a Roman Catholic, raised enough indignation to warrant the offering of a proposition at the Washington Presbytery, on the 16th instant, affirming that "in the opinion of the Presbytery, no minister has a right to marry a Roman Catholic woman. The motion was lost by a vote of 19 to 13

Lord Bacon made a capital estimate of what a sermon should be when he said "Wines, which at first treading run gently are pleasanter than those which are forced from the wine press, for these taste of the stone and of the husk of the grape so those doctrines are exceedingly wholesome and sweet which flow from the Scriptures gently pressed, and are not wrested into controversies and common places.

Pere Hyacinthe has moved into his new chapel in the Rue d'Arras Paris The event is described as follows "At the eastern end of the church in the rear of an elevated platform, the substitue for a chancel, stands an altar, on which is placed a floriated crucifix with the usual candelabras supporting lighted tapers Above the altar are crosses and ornamental designs a bold Latin gilt cross surmounting the whole and nearly rising to the roof Pere Haycinthe celebrated mass vested in a chasuble of cloth of gold, with embroidered cross The service, including the responses and chants, was in the French language.

Czar and Czarina

[illegible]

A grand duke—I shall not say which—said in the reign of the late czar to a great western statesman whenever [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] represented by [illegible] rather than [illegible] His imperial highness looked forward to the extinction of the Romanoff dynasty and to prove that he was a sincere prophet of evil told of the investments which he had been making in republican France. He was asked what reason he had for supposing that the reigning family and the principle they represented were pretty nearly used up. Because, he replied, there is not a man worth a straw in the whole lot, and the women are a lot of poor weeds. The grand duke in question had a good word to say for Michael Nicholaevitch, and Vladimir was an excellent fellow, but he ought to have emigrated to New Zealand or Australia and there followed on a large scale the business of [illegible]. As to the czarewitch, now Alexander [illegible], he was a Kalmuck and his mind was purely rudimentary. He had no belief in anything except the orthodoxy which a woman of narrow provincial intellect—his mother—had stuffed into his head, and the compressing power of brute force. The czarevna his wife was [illegible] and had seductive grace, but she came also of a used up stock. There was some attenuated Marie Antoinette furniture in the room to which the grand duke pointed to illustrate the idea which he wanted to make clear. He asked if the very attenuation of the Marie Antoinette style did not indicate the necessity for the new blood which revolution was to transfuse into French institutions. It was worn almost to a thread when the storm of 1789 burst upon Versailles.

The new czar, it must be admitted, is a rude warrior who does not want to be scratched to show Tartar blood, which of all the Romanoffs he alone shows. He is tall and of massive build, and has more backbone and less shank than the other male descendants of the emperor Paul, from whom he takes his small eyes which are very expressive of pleasure or of anger, the high cheek bones, bridgeless nose, and the wide as well as wide open nostrils. The shape of his mouth, which accords with that of his other features, is now hidden with a short full, brown beard and moustache. In one respect his majesty is German and a Hesse Darmstadt. His majesty is a melomaniac. The sense of melody was until the late empress entered the Romanoff family, denied them, and the late emperor thought music noise. Music has been one of the agencies of which the new czarina made use in taming the savage heart of her husband and attaching him to the domestic hearth. Her tact, liveliness and prettiness enabled her to gain a legitimate influence over him and to polish him up somewhat, for before his marriage he had rough tastes, was allowed to indulge in them, and not to give his eldest brother trouble when the latter came to the throne, had been allowed to [illegible] up uninstructed, unless in Greek orthodoxy and military drill. To the Greek orthodoxy he did not take so kindly as his brother Nicholas, whose birthright and [illegible] he was destined to inherit. Nicholas was a mild, smooth skinned Jacob and afflicted with a spinal malady from his childhood. It occasioned a brain disease, which carried him off at Nice within six months of the time appointed for his wedding. The first journey made by the actual czarina across France was for the purpose of taking an eternal farewell of her betrothed, who expired when she was at his bedside. She returned overburdened with grief to Copenhagen. Russians have a great objection to anything which reminds them of the dead. When a great personage dies, they lock up the room in which he drew his final breath, or wall up the doors. In the poorer classes they think it a profanation to spend in weeping over graves the energies which are needed for the living. Widows remarry, but a Russian does not like to espouse the relict of an intimate friend. When, therefore, the Grand Duke Nicholas Alexandrovitch died, there seemed no prospect of the daughter of King Christian ever recovering the chance which had slipped from her of one day wearing the crown matrimonial of Russia. However, Prince Gortschakoff and her father put their heads together and managed to hand her on to the Czarowitch Alexander, to whom she was married in her nineteenth year.

Her marriage did not give promise of domestic felicity. The czarewitch had formed an attachment for a maid of honor of the Empress, [illegible] Metcherski, and daughter of a noble poet. The Metcherskis, Lanines, Gargarins, and Dolgoroukis formed a powerful clan at court. The particular princess with whom the czarewitch was enamoured was highly gifted with beauty, intellect and delicate sensibilities. She and her imperial lover were called "Beauty and—must I say it all?—the Beast." You know the tale of [illegible] from which the [illegible] were borrowed. The beast in the story was rough outside but the inner man was both adorable and lovable. Princess Metcherski, remembering this, was not offended [illegible] the grand duke's nickname. He proposed to marry Beauty and told his parents he would never accept anyone else for a wife. They sent him from St Petersburg with his regiment. When he was absent she was obliged to accept an offer which prince Paul Demidoff had been instructed to make her. He reluctantly obeyed. She, believing the czarewitch had forsaken her, went with a breaking heart to the [illegible] and directly the ceremony was over he was taken abroad. Within a year she [illegible] leaving an infant son. [illegible] Paul Demidoff was greatly [illegible] her death and to atone for neg[illegible] afterwards threw himself head[illegible] into religion. He gave up the [illegible] Imperial where he sometimes lost [illegible] $500,000 a night at baccarat [illegible] an asylum for poor women in [illegible] Antoine [illegible] Prince Paul [illegible] time devoted to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] youth who spent his life in [illegible] what particular sover[illegible] He finally came to the conclusion that it must be Napoleon [illegible] mark, he was satisfied, was the [illegible] Horn.

When Princess Paul Demidoff was no more Alexander yielded to the raison [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] appointment [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] always with her at his side from professors of history, mathematics and political economy. He and she became inseparable companions and indeed [illegible]. She went with him [illegible] his hunting [illegible]. When his state of health permitted she rode out with him mounted on [illegible] and powerful horse. He on his side accompanied her on her [illegible] visits to Denmark, where they cast state aside and lived a natural [illegible] life. The czarina is slight and tall, but looks [illegible] beside her husband. She has less regular features than the Princess of Wales or the Duchess of Cumberland, but has more expression and animation. Her eyes are those of a song bird. The face is oval and the nose slightly [illegible] the mouth is pouting, for this illustrious lady has full rosy lips. She has beautiful silken hair. Her hands and feet are small and elegant. The figure looks to advantage in a riding habit with a fur collar. I have seen portraits by Romney which were very like the new Czarina, who is imbued with grace, amiability and it is said the faculty of divining spirits. The vulnerable point is a horror of what is vulgar, coarse, unrefined or demo[illegible]. She has never yet been to the Elysee. The Czarevitch visited there when he sojourned at the Hotel Bristol, but she could not bring herself to go with him. Her majesty is refinement itself, and to some extent [illegible]. And yet she was brought up in very straitened circumstances and taught to make her own dresses and bonnets. Her father's income did not exceed [illegible] a year before he ascended the Danish throne.

Hitting and Kicking

Fraser Magazine

It is positively a comfort in its way, to read Mr Carlyle's ferocious judgments of men we know to have been kind, humorous and wise. If he maligns them, the world, too, may be less black than he paints it. He runs amuck among friends and different people with his swashing blow, or kicks them out with a word of contemptuous praise. About some of the kindest and most blameless people, still surviving, Mr Carlyle wrote, in his moody old age, words which we were sure he never meant to be published. Charles Lamb is the greatest sufferer. Mill fares badly, Coleridge still worse, and De Quincey's unkind review of Schiller is amply revenged by the blow of the dead hand. He was a pretty little creature, full of wiredrawn ingenuities, bankrupt enthusiasms, bankrupt pride, with the finest silver toned low voice, and most elaborate gentle winding courtesies and ingenuities in conversation. All these men, Coleridge, Lamb, De Quincey, were more heavily handicapped by health and constitution than Mr Carlyle himself, and they had not his strength to bear the burden. He judged men hardly, and the world harshly; neither they nor it deserve his petulant contempt, nor need we take to shrieking and lamenting, because Mr Gladstone is not Ireton, "nor inspired young Goschen, Cromwell." The constitution of things is averse to the secular triumph of Puritanism; other ways of conceiving of life must have their innings, and, whatever the piece that is mounted on the world's boards, it is not so bad as to deserve the ceaseless hoots and catcalls of Mr Carlyle.

Educating Oysters

All the Year Round

And although it has been doubted that an oyster had been so far subjugated as to "follow its master up and down stairs," a consummation which might be accepted as positive progressive steps in the rise toward ultimate civilization, at least according to "Lewes Sea side Studies," oysters are susceptible of being educated to a small extent. In the great establishments on the coast of Calvados the merchants teach oysters to keep their shells closed when out of the water, by which means the liquor retained keeps their gills moist, and they arrive lively in far distant Paris. The process may be worthy extensive publicity; it is this. No sooner is an oyster taken from the sea than it closes its shells, and opens them after a certain time—from fatigue, it is said, but more probably because the shock it received by removal into the air causing its muscles to contract, has passed away. The Calvados men take advantage of this to exercise the oysters, and make them accustomed to be out of the water, by leaving them daily in the atmosphere for longer and longer periods. This has the desired effect; the well-educated mollusk keeps its doors closed at least for many consecutive hours, and so long as the shell is closed its gills are kept moist.

A Lonely Figure in the House

Mr Disraeli's manner in the house of commons is one strongly marked and is, doubtless undesignedly, calculated to increase the personal interest which has for more than a generation been taken in him by the public. Either because his colleagues do not care to chat with him or because he discourages private conversations in the House, Mr Disraeli invariably sits apart in a sort of grim loneliness. Mr Gladstone is, except when he sleeps, rarely quiet for a moment, frequently engaging in conversation with those near him, often laughing heartily himself and being the cause of laughter in his interlocutors. When Mr Disraeli enters the house and takes his accustomed seat he crosses one leg over the other, folds his arms, hangs down his head and so sits for hours at a time in statuesque silence.

When he rises to speak he generally rests his hand for a moment upon the table, but it is only for a moment, for he invariably endeavors to gain the ear of the audience by making a point at the outset, and the attitude which he finds most conducive to the happy delivery of points is to stand balancing himself upon his feet with his hands in his coat tail pockets. In this position, with his head hung down as if he were mentally debating how best to express a thought that had just occurred to his mind, Mr Disraeli slowly utters the polished and poisoned sentences over which he has spent [illegible] hours in the closet.

The Rev. [illegible] S. Mable will preach at the Baptist church this morning and evening.

A brief shower about ten o'clock last evening cooled the atmosphere delightfully.

A fine woodcut of the Royal gorge adorns the cover of the itinerary presented to the New England excursionists by its managers.

Next Saturday seats will be provided for those ladies who may wish to witness the match game of ball between the D. & R. G. club and the Resolutes.

Mr. E. G. Rowe reports an active demand for real estate, having sold three residences and quite a number of vacant lots during the past week.

Colonel Ensign was busy yesterday in moving his office from the Wanless block into the Hull building, over Bennett's grocery store on Tejon street.

The grounds of the Deaf-Mute institute are being graded preparatory to the erection of the new wing. Twenty thousand dollars will be expended in improvements.

The Matt France Hose Co. No. 1 were out for practice last evening. This is a good sign and it looks as though the boys meant to try for a prize at the tournament.

There will be services to-day in the M. E. church, south, corner Weber and Cucharas streets at 11 a. m. and 7 30 p. m. Sunday school at 3 p. m. All are cordially invited.

A Divide ranchman, who was rather obstreperous on the streets yesterday under the influence of liquor, was arrested by officers Dana and Clement and locked up for the night.

We are glad to learn that Mr. George M. Walker, formerly of the Grand Central hotel, Denver, will be chief clerk of the Manitou house. Mr. Walker is a very pleasant gentleman and thoroughly understands his business.

The Congregational News says: "The committee chosen to secure a new pastor is as follows: President Tenney, chairman; Prof. Sheldon, secretary; Graham Odle, Rev. R. C. Bristol, F. L. Martin, Mrs. S. B. Pickett and Miss Louise K. Noyes."

Mr. L. K. Oldroyd, the Huerfano street photographer, is about to remove into more commodious quarters. He has leased the rooms over G. S. Barnes' handsome store on Tejon street, and is having them put into shape. This change is of material benefit to him.

The real estate transactions for the past week are reported by A. L. Lawton, real estate agent, as being quite large. The following transactions having been made through his office: One sale of $675, one sale of $1,900, one sale of $3,300, and one sale of $1,100. Mr. Lawton says the demand for well located furnished and unfurnished houses is larger than for several years at this time of the year.

Canty Reprieved.

Last evening at about seven o'clock Sheriff Smith received a telegram announcing that Canty had been granted a reprieve and therefore will not be hung on the 13th of the present month. The telegram is very brief merely containing the announcement that the reprieve had been granted. It was sent by Mr. Ganahl, Canty's lawyer, who secured the reprieve. The papers doubtless arrived last evening in the eleven o'clock mail. The length of time granted Canty in the reprieve is not mentioned. The telegram was as follows:

DENVER, Col., April 30th, 1881.
Walter Smith, sheriff:

Inform Canty I have got reprieve. Papers sent you to-night.

BASE BALL

The College Boys Badly Beaten by the Railroad Nine.

The first regular match game of base ball for the season was played yesterday afternoon on the Weber-street grounds. The D. & R. G. club met the College nine and defeated them by a very large score. The game began at 3 o'clock and was witnessed by a large number of interested spectators.

The game was opened by the D. & R. G. nine at the bat, and two runs were scored before they were sent into the field. This score of two was repeated by the D. & R. G. nine in the next two innings, and in the fourth three runs were secured. The fifth inning was the most disastrous of all to the College boys, the railroad players scoring nine. In the sixth inning they scored two, in the seventh one, and in the eighth received the only goose-egg of the day. The last half of the ninth inning was not played by the D. & R. G. club. The score in their favor was 21.

The College boys were most unfortunate, for during the first five innings they secured nothing but zeroes, on the sixth they secured one run, on the seventh a zero, on the eighth two runs and on the ninth a goose egg, making a total of three.

The strong points of the D. & R. G. nine were the pitching of Newman, the catching of Donnelly and the general strength at the bat. Newman is a much better pitcher than many professionals and he is ably supported by Donnelly behind the bat.

Stovell did some splendid batting and brought in a number of men during the game by his strong hitting. Hedges made a number of good plays and no errors. Willetts made the best score, making five runs and no outs. The number of base hits credited in our tabular resume to the railroad nine shows that the batting was especially strong.

The College boys were bothered by Newman's pitching and seemed almost entirely at his mercy. His curved balls led them astray and they had hard work to hit them at all. La Lanne, Hart and Cooper scored a run each and thus saved the nine from making a clean score of zeroes. Towards the end of the game they got hold of the pitching a little better.

The game was an interesting one and showed plainly that in the D. & R. G. club Colorado Springs possesses an exceptionally strong nine. We are confident that they can beat any nine in the state.

The College nine disbanded as a college club after the game yesterday and reorganized under the name of Resolutes. They will play another match game with the D. & R. G. club next Saturday.

We give below a resume of the runs, first-base hits, outs and errors of the members of both clubs:

Teachers' Tariff.

The following letter has been received by Professor Cornell, State Superintendent of public instruction:

DENVER, Colorado, April 26, 1881.

Dear Sir I am requested by the general passenger agents of the various lines doing business in the state of Colorado, to advise you that they extend to the teachers of the state, who desire to make a trip during the summer vacation, a reduced rate of one fare for the round trip from all points in Colorado to Missouri river and return. It is intended that this courtesy shall only be extended to persons actively engaged in the business of teaching in public schools of the state and other corporations within the state during the current year.

Applications which are certified by you to be correct, under the limitations may be sent to the undersigned, when orders for the reduced rate will be forwarded to the applicants by mail. Tickets for this purpose will be for sale at the principal ticket offices of these lines in Colorado from June 10 to July 10, inclusive, and will be good to return until September 10, 1881.

Yours truly,
S. F. PIERSON, Commissioner.

The following "pupil's local" from the Deaf-Mute Index gives some light as to the fate of Colorado Springs toads: "One of the boys always loves to play with the frogs and toads. When he finds them on the ground. He is glad that he has seen them he always sells them to the Chinese when he has them. The Chinese get them and will give him 5 or 10 cents for them."

The Rev. W. L. Slutz, pastor of the M. E. church, will hold service in Court House Hall at 11 a. m. and 7 30 p. m. to-day; Sunday school at 9 30 a. m.

Concerning Cattle Near Durango.

We find the following concerning the cattle interests of southern Colorado in the Denver Tribune of yesterday: "At a meeting of the Colorado Cattle Grower's association in this city, two or three weeks ago, Mr. A Barron, the state inspector, was instructed to visit Durango and the northwestern portion of the state to examine into the condition of affairs there touching the cattle interests of that section, which had been so seriously injured by the depredations of incursionists, whose work the ranchmen were unable apparently to counteract or prevent. The mission of Mr. Barron was for prudential reasons kept as quiet as possible, and very few persons were cognizant of his going on the delicate and dangerous errand except those who arranged for it.

"Mr. Barron returned to Denver yesterday, and will prepare a report to the association embodying the result of his observations and inquiries.

"Mr. Barron informed the Tribune that he found a very bad state of affairs existing at Durango. There seems to be two distinct parties operating there, the transactions of neither of which would be tolerated for a day in any law and order country. Colorado ranchmen have suffered considerable loss from the work of these people, but owing to the personal difficulties existing between the two factions, have been unable to prosecute their claims or redress their wrongs. The Colorado people are trying to pursue a legal course for a settlement of the difficulties. Thompson and Lacy, whose names have been mentioned in reports, are trying to make some compromise to protect their stock, in which effort they have considerable quiet support, and may be successful."

Miss Pinneo's Record

According to the Greeley Tribune Miss Pinneo's first appearance on a track as a twenty-mile equestrienne was at Minneapolis, on September 4th, 1880, where she rode against the famous Californian equestrienne, Miss Belle Cook. She was defeated in this, her maiden effort, solely by accidents which no one could possibly foresee. Not a whit discouraged, she still considered herself the best twenty-mile equestrienne in the United States and kept to the track. Her next race of any importance was at Chicago in October, 1880, where she rode against Miss Jewett, of Minneapolis, defeating her by a neck in fifty minutes and five seconds. Immediately after this race she issued a challenge to ride any woman in the United States for $5,000 a side, which challenge was accepted by Miss Nellie Curtis, of Topeka, Kansas. Miss Pinneo has not only the advantage of being a more daring and skilled horse-woman, but also that of being very expert in changing from one horse to another. During her race with Miss Cook, at Minneapolis, she accomplished the remarkable feat of changing from one horse to another in the almost incredible time of five seconds, which is the quickest change on record for either man or woman."

An Intelligent Dog.

Judge Carey of Carson City, Nevada, is a just judge no doubt, at least he is a good judge of a big story if we can believe the Carson City Appeal which credits his honor with relating the following anecdote concerning a dog he once owned who was used to herd lumber. The judge is alleged to have told the story as follows while the jury was out: "I had a dog once, back in Nebraska, that I kept to herd lumber."

"Beg pardon, judge; did you say the dog herded lumber?"

"Yes, sir, cottonwood boards. We always kept the dog there to bring the lumber in at night."

Everybody now paid the closest attention, as they knew the boss was at work.

"It was this way: Cottonwood boards warp like thunder in the sun. A board would begin to hump its back up about 9 o'clock in the morning, and in half an hour it would turn over. By 11 o'clock it would warp the other way with the heat, and make another flop. Each time it turned it moved a couple of feet, always following the sun toward the west. The first summer I lived in Brownville over 10,000 feet of lumber skipped out to the hills the day before I had advertised a house raisin'. I went to the county seat to attend a lawsuit, and when I got back there wasn't a stick of timber left. It had strayed away into the uplands. An ordinary board would climb a two mile hill during a hot week, and when it struck the timber it would keep wormin' in and out among the trees like a garter snake. Every farmer in the state had to keep shepherd dogs to follow his lumber around the country, keep it together, and show where it was in the morning. We didn't need any flumes there for lumber. We sawed it east of the place we wanted to use it, and let it warp itself to its destination, with men and dogs to head it off at the right time, we never lost a stick. Well, here comes the jury," continued the judge. "The witnesses lied, so I guess they will disagree."

Robbed by Sneak Thieves.

Mr. R. W. Mason, proprietor of the El Paso house, on Huerfano street, was robbed last Friday night of something over $30 in money. About eleven o'clock a man called at the hotel and asked for lodgings. Mr. Mason told him he could have a room and the man produced a two-dollar bill to pay for it in advance. The bill was a ragged one and Mr. Mason told the man he could settle in the morning. The man then said that two men had disembarked from the Denver train with him and would probably want rooms also. The man then went out but soon returned saying that he could not find the men. Mr. Mason then showed the man his room and returning to the office retired to sleep. Before long the man came down and making some excuse passed into the back yard. Mr Mason waited for his return but he did not come. About 4 o'clock he went up to the man's room, found it empty and the lamp burning. He extinguished the light and returning to the office examined the pockets of his trousers and found that his pocket book had been taken with all of its contents, something over $30. He thinks that the man who applied for lodgings must have informed an accomplice of the situation of affairs when he went out the first time, and that when he was shown to his room the accomplice entered the office and stole the money. The officers are engaged in working up the case.
